PRINCE HARRY Parties in the USA!

ALL WORK AND NO PLAY FOR PRINCE HARRY? Hardly. The day after reporting for Apache helicopter training in El Centro, California, October 6, the royal, 27, and three pals traveled two hours to Coronado for burgers and beer at McP's Irish Pub & Grill, owned by a former Navy SEAL. "He was very comfortable," manager Ted Taylor tells Hot Stuff. "Just shooting the s--t." Later, he joined a group at the Andaz San Diego's Ivy Rooftop. "They hung out by the pool," says a witness. "They drank beer, vodka and Red Bull and watched a rugby match from a private cabana." Like any soldier, the prince will spend the bulk of his time on base. "It's an intensive course," says an insider. "So Harry's looking forward to his downtime."

Harry (in San Diego Oct. 9) completes training in December.

"Brad was furious," says an insider. "We're already behind schedule."

Pitt: Gun Trouble!

Farewell to arms! Production was held up on Brad Pitt's thriller World War Z when Hungarian authorities confiscated five functional prop machine guns en route to the Budapest set. "These guns are highly illegal to transport," Hajdu János of the antiterrorism unit tells Hot Stuff, adding that the investigation is ongoing. Pitt, 47, used the downtime to request a shampoo from his hairdresser. Says a source of the actor (who sports greasy locks on screen), "He says he'll get thrown out if he goes home like that!"

Davis

Kristin's a Mommy!

Just like her small-screen counterpart, Kristin Davis turned to adoption to fulfill her dream of becoming a mom. The Sex and the City actress, who welcomed baby Gemma Rose a few months ago, "has been talking about doing this for a while," a source close to the actress, 46, tells Hot Stuff. In a 2010 interview, the star — who's been linked to actors Alec Baldwin and Rick Fox — admitted the idea of single parenthood gave her pause. "It's a really hard job," she said. But the pal says she's more than ready: "She's really loving and caring. She'll make a great mom."
