THE IVY'S ROCKIN' YES: LMFAO in Diego, Trick

LMFAO took to the stage in all their neon-colored glory with sunglasses sans lenses, and bottles of Goose, for an unbelievable crowd at the Envy nightclub at the Ivy Thursday night.

While most bands need a huge stage to show off their skills, LMFAO took the party to a whole new level on its plank-sized platform. LMFAO has been killin' it in clubs everywhere by bringing electro beats mixed with hip-hop, combined with those feel-good flashbacks from the old school house party.

LMFAO is inspired by its time spent in Miami at the Winter Music Conference (WMC) two years ago, when the nephew-uncle duo came back in awe of South Beach life and culture.

LMFAO is extremely DIY, creating their music in a studio apartment in L.A., masterminding their own clothing line "Party Rock" and personally updating fans daily via their Blog.

With no future dates planned as of yet in San Diego, you will have to chase the boys around the country or even Europe to recapture the tingly LMFAO sensation from Thursday night -- but as Diegans, there's no reason to not be inspired by their lyrics in the meantime -- "Every day I see my dream..."

KELI'S PICKS: Hooray for hub cap cinema!

Seeing steel and rubber bolting across a screen is not a boys-only thrill. I-of-the-female-gonads have also gotten lost in plot lines involving dark freeway chases and sleek machines, or with Clive Owen grinding the gearbox on a thing of beauty, or a supernatural car vying for a teen's affection. My favorite (non-"Fast and Furious") car-centric films:
