

Issue #72
October 24, 2010

Us

WEEKLY

Prince Harry's
Wild American Nights!

Us EXCLUSIVES
Wedding Albums

Twilight's Nikki Reed

3 Dresses for Shannen!

JEN'S SECRET ROMANCE

After Bradley pursues her for weeks with late-night calls
and intimate dinners,
J. Lo spends the night.
Why she took a chance on him

Work hard, play harder! Stateside for military training, the rowdy royal rocks out at a California club

BY KEVIN O'LEARY

A SOLD-OUT CROWD came to see local band Vokab Kompany play the Belly Up Tavern in Solana Beach, California, October 15. But clubgoers couldn't tear their eyes from the hot guy in the VIP section: Wearing a baseball cap and flannel shirt, Prince Harry was drinking beer and blowing off steam with 10 friends after his first week of Apache helicopter training at California's El Centro Naval Air Facility. "He is even cuter in person," the bar's rep Meryl Klemow tells Us of the royal, who stayed until 1:15 a.m.,

Harry's Wild Nights

"He's a good dancer," Belly Up's marketing director, Klemow, tells Us of the prince, who busted a move at the club Oct. 15. "He wasn't scamming on the chicks. Just having fun and being casual."

LITTLE PRINCE

From cute tyke to sexiest royal bachelor, Harry grew up in public

"Harry's the naughty one," Princess Diana (in 1990) said. "Just like me."

"He's got a big heart," Prince William (with Prince Charles in 1997) said of Harry.

dancing and watching rugby on TV. "He is the modern-day, more fun version of Prince Charming."

And this Prince Charming is very, very single. Third in line to the British throne, the hard-partying prince, 27, is relishing his nights out while big brother William settles into marriage and royal duties. "Harry really has played his 'spare heir' card," says an insider. "He loves being able to be the one without the overwhelming responsibility." That means a second weekend in a row of hitting the hot spots for the hunky Army captain Harry Wales, as he's known on the base (where they filmed Top Gun!). But California girls, consider yourselves warned: "Harry likes a laugh and a flirt," says a close source. "He loves female attention, but it's all for the moment."

UP ALL NIGHT

The prince and his party — including two local ladies — rolled into Belly Up at 9:30 p.m. "We heard a buzz about him being here," Vokab Kompany vocalist Robbie Gallo tells Us. Belly Up general manager Jeff Keeping tells Us Harry — who downed tequila shots and draft beer — was a "generous" tipper: "He was just having fun with his friends." Klemow adds that

Harry, who a pal calls "quite a wild dancer," was "getting into the music, dancing."

The prince first made a splash, literally, on the local scene the night after his October 6 arrival, when he stripped down to his skivvies and jumped in the rooftop pool at the Andaz hotel. He also won over one drenched local girl by chivalrously offering her his towel (see box, right). "He loved the cocktail waitresses," says a source at the hotel, where he spent the night. "He wanted the waitresses to serve him in his room." (They didn't.)

"I've rarely seen him give his phone number to any girl. Them giving him numbers is another matter!"

A HARRY SOURCE

GINGER SPICE

Flirting aside, Harry's not looking for the next Kate Middleton. "He will charm girls," says the close source, "tell them sweet stuff, but it's all part of the act. Though he never plays with a girl's feelings." In fact, the world's most eligible bachelor will go to tremendous lengths to avoid being photographed.

Harry was just 12 when the princes lost their mother, Diana.

The prince served on the front line in Afghanistan in 2008.

"He doesn't have airs," a pal says of Harry (in July).

He called on-off love Davy (in 2007) "very special to me."

He helped teach Queen Elizabeth II to text!

Fans hoped for a Pippa-Harry match at the 2011 royal wedding.

with a woman, whom the press will undoubtedly dub the new princess-to-be. "He'll run out of buildings, climb through windows, sneak out through restaurant side doors," says another insider. "I've seen him run down the road to get away from the fuss and leave his security guys freaking out because they don't know where he got to."

Perhaps his seven-year roller-coaster relationship with Zimbabwean heiress Chelsy Davy, 26, explains his flirt-and-flee MO. "One minute he'd be with Chelsy every day, and the next he's totally against the idea of a serious relationship," the close source says of the pair, who split again this summer. "Then Chelsy gets frustrated, suddenly hates him; he won't understand why; and, gosh, most of their friends are fed up." Bad news for their pals: The pair had at least three secret meetings before his trip to America, says the close source. "Give it a few months and you'll see them together again. Once he's done in America, it will happen."

But for now, he has two more months of fun with the women of America. Says the close source, "He says he has enough years ahead to focus on relationships and love." US

My Night With Harry

The prince, dressed in nothing but his underwear, came to Lindsay Swagerty's rescue at Andaz hotel's Ivy Rooftop October 7. Harry and a group of his mates were having an impromptu swim in the bar's pool when the office assistant got thrown in fully clothed. The prince sprang into action. "He came over to me to wrap his towel around me," Swagerty tells Us. The two hung out at the Ivy the following night, too. "He has a very charming personality."

"It was so fun," Swagerty says of meeting the prince.

With reporting by Sinda Scarborough, Orin Siskin, Pat Sherman, Sophie Wikes-Dudgeon & Tarisha Williams